

Yon Toccoa Herald says the Northern railroad will, under favorable circumstances, be completed from Athens to Atlanta by the first day of November.

The suspension of the Commercial Exchange company, soon after the fall of D. S. & Co., is a Cuban institution. Its stock is owned there, and its editors are chiefly there. Its business related to the importation of Cuban sugar. The Cuban revolution, and not the failure of Duncan, Sherman & Co., led to the suspension.

Now that Columbus has become a way station on the Central railroad, she will probably see increased advantages in an extension of the North and South road to Atlanta. "There are no competing lines," says the Columbus Times, "at this point, and from that fact many of the merchants of the city attribute our difficulties in making good freight arrangements."

BACHELOR in his "Popular Resorts" says: "Atlanta, aside from its importance as a railroad centre, and from the war associations with which it is connected, has little to recommend it to the traveler or tourist." But who is Bachelor? Who ever saw a copy of his book? It is safe to say that there is little in it to recommend it to the traveler, tourist or any other man.

The Macon Telegraph is satisfied that the State University is free of denominationalism, because during much the larger portion of the past history of the institution, the Presbyterians controlled the first office, then a Methodist was elected, and when he voluntarily retired, the present incumbent, a Baptist, was chosen. At all times too, the several evangelical denominations have been represented, as they are now, upon the faculty.

SHAM gallantry, such gallantry is characterized the average Frenchman, as humorously illustrated in the following popular paragraph:

ATLANTA,
SUNDAY MORNING, JULY 31, 1875.

The people of western Texas desire to have the state divided, with San Antonio for their capital.

The republicans of Maryland talk of G. C. Fulton, the B. Littauer American, as their candidate for governor.

Careful examination of the rumored democratic bolt in Maryland fails to discover any traces of its existence outside of the republican newspaper offices.

An ex-rebel who hates stealing is infinitely better for the present use in this country than any loyal thief that exists. —[Now York Sun.]

Gen. Dodge, of Iowa, who was wanted so badly but couldn't be found during the credit-mobilier investigation, has been heard from at last, and is said to be at Council Bluffs fixing up Belknap for the United States.

One of the most interesting events of our day is the surrender of the British government to Mr. Pimlico. The public opinion that is behind him was too strong for them. The British people will not have men sent to sea in ships that are not seaworthy.

UNITED STATES SENATOR ROBERTSON, of South Carolina, is at the Wamspring with his family, including a son who has been at Georgetown college. Monday was the young man's twenty-first birthday, and on raising his plate at breakfast he found a check from his father for $10,000. —[Staunton (Va.) Vindicator.]

The floods continue. All through southern Ohio and southern Indiana the streams are swollen and the crops are rotting in the fields. Such continuous and prevalent rains were never known in this region. The damage done is almost incalculable, and, so far as the crops are concerned, irreparable.

He was invited to ask his dress at Paris, and on the river Rhine and Danube, and has given out that he will swim the Hellespont without the dress, after the manner of Byron, who swam from Sebas to Abydos in 1810, when only twenty-two years old.

The bulk of the fortune goes to the Emperor Joseph, and the family estate to the Archduke Franz Karl, the emperor's father.

FATHER TOM BURKE, a great Democrat, has been given a loan to help him. He is in his home in Ireland. He enjoys the best of spirits, but from the nature of his malady his convalescence must necessarily be slow. Dr. Brown, his medical attendant, has an excellent opinion of him. The first step looking to revision of the present state constitution of Kentucky will be taken by the people at the August election. If a majority of all the qualified voters in the state vote in favor of calling a convention, the question will have to be submitted in 1877, and if it again receives the approbation of a majority of the voters in the state, the members of the convention will be elected in August, 1878, and assemble in the fall of that year.

COL. GREGORY K. LEET, a cousin of the wife of President Grant, has been appointed an inspector in the c. s. m. house at $4 a day. Six years ago he resigned from the president's military staff to join Col. Stocks in the general order business. The first of Leet & Stocking became notorious, and made $300,000 out of importers within two years. Last winter Leet sold his contract with the government to Frank Squires for $30,000. He has lost all the money he made by speculation. —[N. Y. Sun.]

The Right Rev. Conon Thirlwall, the Bishop of St. David's, Wales, is now at the Charterhouse and at Trinity college, Cambridge, of which he became a fellow. In 1882 he became rector of Kersey Underdale, in Yorkshire, and in 1840 was consecrated bishop of St. David's, South Wales. Dr. Thirlwall was a fine theologian and historian, and his life was pure and blameless to an eminent degree. His "History of Greece" is his best known work, and he was one of the translators of "Niebuhr."

THE CHOLERA OF 1873.

Surgeon Eli McClellan's report of the epidemic of 1873 is now passing through the government press, and will soon be ready for distribution. It forms a volume of 900 pages, and is intended to be a very exhaustive work on the subject. Dr. McClellan was detailed by the secretary of war, in pursuance of a joint resolution of congress, to visit the towns in which the epidemic prevailed, to collect as far as possible all facts of importance in regard to it, and to make a detailed report to the president. He has done all that, and much more besides; for he has given a history of the travels of Asiatic cholera both in the old and new world. To this he has added 200 pages that present a full list of books and articles relating to cholera, which will be found valuable by those who want to wade into the subject deeper than we propose to go.

The greater part of his report, however, relates to the disease that was raging two years ago in Tennessee and in many other towns of the Mississippi valley. He claims that it came from the eastern world through the arrival of vessels infected with cholera-sick, or laden with emigrants and their property from infected districts. Its singular jumps across states are attributed to its transmissibility through articles of clothing, bedding, furniture, etc., which retain indefinitely their power of infection. He also claims that the virulence of a cholera demonstration, after its introduction in a community, is influenced by the hygienic condition of the population, and not by any formation upon which they may reside. This position, if sound, destroys the idea that limestone water promotes the disease. It is a little singular, nevertheless, that the hygienic condition of the freestate districts should have been unanimously good, and that of the limestone sections equally bad in 1873. But we do not dispute Surgeon McClellan's conclusions, for he has given two years' uninterrupted study to the subject. We simply congratulate the freestate territory on its high hygienic condition, and hope it may remain so. We also hope Eli is not trying to pull the limestone districts, and that they will stand strictly to their hygienic condition hereafter.

His course is a matter of so recent history as to need no special elaboration. His bitter feelings gave way before his conceptions of right and justice.

prevent the spread of the disease. And let no man think that one attack will give him immunity from the disease in the future—the contrary is well established. After prescribing a number of things in the line of dress and diet, he caps them all with Niemeyer's rules, which are the best of all, for they direct all persons to leave an infected district, as follows:

1. To start soon enough.
2. To go as far as possible.
3. Not to return until the last trace of the disease has disappeared.

ANDREW JOHNSON.

Yester evening we published a special dispatch from Greenville, Tennessee, stating that Ex-President Johnson had been stricken with paralysis, but hopes of his recovery were added, which operated to alarm alarm among his friends. To-day, however, the wires bring the sad tidings that the stroke was fatal, and the spirit of this great man has gone to his final repose.

Andrew Johnson was born in Raleigh, North Carolina, in the year 1808, a year prolific of great men to America. His parentage was humble, though a monuments marks, in the ancient cemetery of Raleigh, the grave of his father, who died when he was a boy. Just at the outset of his new career he was suddenly stricken down. What his achievements would have been no man can tell. He died vindicated of all the charges that led to his impeachment, not only before the people of Tennessee, but before the whole country. He died in the hour of victory, as he was preparing for the best and boldest work of his eventful life. The country has lost his services, but he has passed away at a time when his permanent fame is well assured.

THE DEMOCRATIC CONVENTION.

A very active contest is progressing between the eastern and western cities for the honor of the next national convention.

Baltimore and the other eastern cities are, of course, hungry for it. They consider it their own property, and in wardly sound the idea of holding it anywhere else but on the Atlantic seaboard.

The bulk of the fortune goes to the Emperor Joseph, and the family estate to the Archduke Franz Karl, the emperor's father.

FATHER TOM BURKE, a great Democrat, has been given a loan to help him. He is in his home in Ireland. He enjoys the best of spirits, but from the nature of his malady his convalescence must necessarily be slow. Dr. Brown, his medical attendant, has an excellent opinion of him. The distinguished patient is zealously watched by his venerable mother, his sister and nieces, who are in constant attendance upon him.

PAUL BOTTON has been lost sight of in Europe since his return from the campaign. He was invited to ask his dress at Paris, and on the river Rhine and Danube, and has given out that he will swim the Hellespont without the dress, after the manner of Byron, who swam from Sebas to Abydos in 1810, when only twenty-two years old.

The late Emperor Ferdinand had kept after his abdication the family estate and the large private fortune left him by the Emperor Francis, and this fortune he considerably increased owing to his retired mode of life. The bulk of the fortune goes to the Emperor Joseph, and the family estate to the Archduke Franz Karl, the emperor's father.

THE WEDDING FEES.

By R. M. STREETER.

One morning, fifty years ago, when apple trees were white with snow, and fragrant blossoms, and the air was spell bound with the perfume, a young and happy maid, and her boy, with his double load, a sun-brown youth, and maid were seen jogging along the winding road.

Blue were the arches of the skies, but blue were the maid's eyes, and the world was the bright, but brighter was the loving light, that sparkled 'neath the long fragrant lid, and the young eyes were hid. Adorn the shoulders brown and bare of the soft waves of golden hair, while, almost strangled with the spray, The sun, a smiling master, lay.

It was the fairest sight, I ween, that eyes have ever seen; And with his features all aglow, The happy fellow told her so! She stood about the shade of maples, And on her face those heavenly eyes, saw underneath that shade of tan The handsome features of a man; She drove that dear face to her own, And by her bridal bidden hid— I cannot tell you what she did!

So on they went until, among The new born leaves with dew drops hung, The sun was down, and eyes surveyed The scene of beauty, and the scene of woe. Piers out—a more than welcome sight. Then, with a cloud upon his face, "What shall we do?" he turned to say.

"Should he refuse to take his pay From what is now a plain, unpeopled way? Then, the sun's here's the bairn?" Then the son of the household gate Halted the more than willing steed.

Down from the horse the bridegroom sprang; The latchkey gave behind him swing; "The knocker of that stabled door, Struct as never was before, Broke the house about the whole household gate right;"

And there with blinks on his cheek, So bashful he could hardly speak. The farmer met their wondering sight.

"Thee and thy goin', like a will o' wisp, And the tattered leeks he leans Far o'er the window-sill and yells, "Come in! He says he'll take the beans!"
